A GREAT Summer Camp

By Scott Sery

This summer over 80 kids between the ages of 4 and 12 poured in to Carla's house for the inaugural IronHood summer camp. Carla had the idea to invest in young people's lives even more than running G.R.E.A.T. presentations at local schools, and the best way to do that is to hold a summer camp at home!

For just the cost of the t-shirt that every kid received, the children were able to have one of the best weeks of their summer. New neighbors now feel right at home, and each day the kids would leave asking for more.

From tug-o'-ware, to potato sack races, to water fun and soccer teams, the kids learned all about teamwork and the importance of valuing each other. By Thursday everyone was feeling a little worn down, so the events focused on crafts and making thank-you cards for our local police officers. On Friday there was an enormous show-and-tell talent show where every kid brought something they loved or showed off their talents. Stuffed animals, pictures, gymnastic moves, singing and joke telling abounded. The camp ended with a visit from Bailey's ice-cream truck (Bailey is one of the first 50 G.R.E.A.T. girls, and she had a blast giving out ice cream to over 80 kids at once).

This event was made possible two ways: first from all the parents and teenagers that volunteered their time to help keep things running smoothly, and keep the kids energized with healthy snacks. Second, the love that everyone shared to help make it a great event not just for some, but for all.
